

How long will it take to process my application? What are the steps after I apply? What happens after you apply?

After You Apply

Your application goes through several stages before a decision is made:

1. Initial Review

Applications must meet all requirements and be complete to avoid delays. If information is missing, you must respond to requests within 2 weeks or inform staff if more time is needed. Failure to comply may result in rejection, with possible partial or no refund. Rejected applications can be resubmitted after issues are addressed.

2. Consultation & Referrals

Your application may be shared with provincial/federal agencies, First Nations, and other affected parties for review and feedback.

3. Technical Review

After feedback is received, your application undergoes technical assessment. You may need to provide additional information or conduct further studies. A recommendation is then made to a decision-maker.

4. Decision

A provincial water manager reviews all information and decides whether to approve your application. You will be notified of the outcome.

5. Enquiries

You can check your application status or learn more about the process through official channels.

More information on this can be found at:

<https://www2.gov.bc.ca/gov/content/environment/air-land-water/water/water-licensing-rights/water-licences-approvals/apply-for-a-water-licence/apply-licence#chapter-optional>